PREFACE

This volume is not only a brief history of the Association since it was founded a hundred years ago, but it presents in general outline the advancement of science in North America for the century from 1848 to 1948

The Association was the first, and is yet the only, American scientific society that is national in scope and whose interests extend into all the fields of the natural and the social sciences. In the first third of its existence the progress of American science was almost completely recorded in the proceedings of its meetings. But with the unparalleled developments of science as the decades passed, new societies in special fields grew out of the sections of the Association and became affiliated societies of the parent organization. There are now 207 such associated scientific societies and academies of science. In order to present some measure of their number, variety, and importance, this volume contains also a brief sketch of the founding, purposes, membership, publications, etc., of all its affiliated scientific societies.

Although scientific societies have contributed greatly to the advancement of science, new ideas are born only in the minds of inspired men. Scientific organizations provide the mechanisms for chain-reactions, from individual to individual, until the whole scientific fraternity becomes aglow with the light that originated in a few. In order to give recognition to the importance of fundamental advances in science by individuals, the century under consideration is divided into five twenty-year intervals, and the outstanding scientific achievements throughout the world in each of them are briefly described. It is hoped that the enumeration of these relatively few fundamental scientific advances and that the sketches of their influence on the progress of science will clarify the history of American science as it is here very briefly recorded.

Each twenty-year interval of the history of the Association closes with a brief statistical summary of the activities of the Association during the period. The names of its presidents year by year are a record of the men who were then leaders in American science, the cities in which the meetings were held are evidence of the widely expanding appreciation of science throughout the United States and Canada, the number of papers presented at the meetings are a rough measure of the interest they aroused, and the number of members of the Association at the close of each year measures the ups and downs of organized science in its youthful days in America.

The general statistical summaries include a list of all the meetings of the Association and of the Pacific and the Southwestern divisions, lists of the presidents of the Association and of the divisions, and lists of the administrative officers of the Association and of the divisions. For the interval 1940-1948 the names of the officers of the sections are also listed. For this same period the titles of the addresses of all Presidents of the Association and of the divisions are given and the places of their publication Likewise the titles of the addresses of all Vice Presidents of the Association are given and, except when unknown, the places of their publication

A large part of this volume is necessarily given over to a complete alphabetical directory of all persons who were members of the Association between July 1, 1940 (the date of publication of the last preceding directory) and December 31, 1947 The names of a large fraction of the leading scientists in this country are included among the 40,000 in this directory The name of each member is followed by the year of his birth, his address, the university from which he received his highest degree, his field of specialization, his professional position, the year he became a member of the A A A S, the year he became a fellow, and the sections of the Association with which he is affiliated

The final section of this volume contains a geographical index of all members of the Association at December 31, 1947 That is, the names and sectional affiliations of all members who are residents of the United States are arranged, first, by states in alphabetical order, then by cities and towns within the states, also by alphabetical order, and, finally, the names in each state and city are arranged in alphabetical order In the case of members who are residents of foreign countries, 76 in number, the names are arranged by continents, countries, cities, and individuals, all in alphabetical order Obviously the Geographical Index enables one to find the names of specialists in any of the principal fields of science in all the principal scientific centers in the United States and Canada

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE ASSOCIATION

I Historical Background

Science has had no definite beginning in either time or place. Like a great river whose numerous sources are in distant springs and streams, science had its origins in the minds of many men in remote times and in widely separated places. In Persia, Babylonia, Egypt, Greece, India, China, and doubtless among many other unknown or forgotten peoples, men were groping during long periods for an understanding of the universe about them and of their relations to it. In spite of the difficulties of making and preserving records of observed phenomena, the achievements of our predecessors of two thousand years ago are worthy of high respect and admiration.

It is true that much of the science of ancient days has been found to be imperfect, if not quite erroneous, and often mixed with, and colored by, superstitions. The heliocentric theory of the universe, for example, has been abandoned, the three primordial elements are now regarded as fictions of the imagination, and even the geometry of Euclid has been found to be not logically complete in the modern sense. But finality has not been achieved in any domain of science or philosophy. Even since 1900 ideas of space and time have been transformed by Einstein and the atoms are no longer the "fundamental building stones" of matter. In view of the rapid revolutionary changes in current scientific theories, scientists of the present day look back with tolerance and high respect at the work of their predecessors of earlier times.

In addition to the inquisitiveness of the human mind, four factors contributed greatly to rapid advances in science at various times during the past two or three thousand years. The first is that the invention of alphabets and writing made it easier for scientists to maintain records of their observations and experiments and to communicate with one another. The second is that scientists often made leisurely visits to scientists in other countries than their own and discussed with them their observations and theories. The third was the easy and rapid dissemination of ideas made possible by the invention of printing. The fourth was the founding of universities, scientific societies, and academies of science.

These organizations provided unparalleled opportunities for scientists to exchange ideas with one another and for give-and-take personal discussions. The academies of science became the channels into which the streamlets of individual scientific efforts have poured and swept onward. In many respects the American Association for the Advancement of Science, now with more than 200 affiliated and associated societies having a combined membership of half a million scientists, represents the broadest and most powerful flood of scientific effort in the world. Whether the swift currents of science now rush mankind onward toward an earthly paradise or toward total destruction is a question that rises darkly in many minds

Perhaps current science is concerned too much, at least in the minds of the public, with great concentrations of energy, with high velocities, with possible trips to the moon and the planets, with more leisure, with more of everything that temporarily gratifies the senses. This is the scientific age to the masses of mankind in the sense that they know how to push buttons and turn switches to amuse their minds and to satisfy their physical desires

Science, however, is concerned with general principles and the so-called laws of nature. The laws of nature are partial and imperfect descriptions of the orderliness of the Universe by which the mind of the scientist reaches back into the past and forward into the future and brings them, in a sense, into the present. Similarly, by means of the laws of nature, the mind of the scientist reaches down toward the infinitely small and out toward the infinitely large and brings them within his horizon. On reflection it is realized that the relations among the perceptions, not the magnitudes they represent in time or space, are what give the mind the highest satisfaction. But these definitions of the importance of science cannot be reduced to measurable standards, and consequently the history of the Association and of its contributions to the advancement of science must be presented in simpler terms. Nevertheless it is the general principles, or laws of nature, in science which are important and on the basis of which great advancements in science are largely made.

It was remarked in an earlier paragraph that the founding of universities, scientific societies, and academies of science have contributed greatly to scientific progress. One of the earliest, if not the earliest, formal scientific society was the Brethren of Sincerity (Ikhwan al-sofa), established at Basra (Iraq) about 983 A.D., where the Euphrates and Tigris rivers unite on their way to the Persian Gulf. The members of this society wrote 52 treatises which together were practically an encyclopedia, and of which 17 books dealt with natural sciences and 14 with mathematics and logic. They contained discussions of various natural phenomena, such as eclipses, earthquakes, tides, and the transmission of sound, implying that many centuries of science preceded them among individuals, if not in organized groups. Indeed, the golden age of Greek science preceded the Basra society by more than a thousand years, and Alexandria, in Egypt, had risen (and declined) as one of the foremost centers of learning in the world.

After the founding of a society of scientists in Basra in 983, academies of science were from time to time established in various parts of Europe. In 1560 the Academia Secretorum Naturae was founded at Naples, a condition for membership being some discovery in natural science. The Academia dei Lincei, of which Galileo was a founding member, was established in 1603. The Accademia del Cimento was founded in Florence in 1657, the Royal Society of London received its charter in 1662, the Académie des Sciences, of which Descartes and Pascal were members, was founded in 1666. Then followed the Preussische Akademie der Wissenschaften in 1700, the Russian

Academy of Sciences in 1725, the Royal Swedish Academy in 1741, and the American Philosophical Society in 1743

American educational institutions and scientific societies were inspired by, and modeled after, the universities and academies of science which, beginning with the Crusades (1096-1291), sprang up in many parts of western Europe. In 1100 three schools were founded in Paris, a medical faculty was organized in Bologna in 1156, students assembled in Oxford in 1167, a charter was granted the University of Paris in 1200, Peterhouse College, Cambridge, was opened to students in 1284, the University of Vienna began operations in 1364, and Harvard College was founded in 1636. Within 300 years of the founding of Harvard College there were more than 900 universities, colleges, and professional schools in the United States.

A quite different kind of scientific society was initiated with the founding, in 1831, of the British Association for the Advancement of Science. In 1848, the British Association was followed, in the same pattern, by the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Similar societies with similar names have been organized more recently in Australia-New Zealand, in France, and in South Africa. The distinguishing characteristics of these societies are that they are national in scope and include within their circle of interests all the natural sciences.

II. The Founding of the Association

The founding of the American Association for the Advancement of Science was the culmination of several attempts to establish a truly national scientific society in North America which had been made during a period of more than 30 years. In 1816, fifteen years before the founding of the British Association and 32 years before the founding of the A A A S, an ambitious organization was launched in the United States under the name of the Columbian Institute for the Promotion of Arts and Sciences. Instead of having as its avowed purpose simply the advancement of science, it enumerated many and diverse purposes for which it was founded, such as the introduction and distribution of plants, the investigation of minerals and other natural resources, the promotion of agriculture and foreign commerce, the making of topographic surveys of different parts of the country, the founding of a national museum and a national library.

Among the officers and members of this new society there were such distinguished men as John Quincy Adams, John C. Calhoun, Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, and Edward Everett. Meetings were held twice a year for several years, but the enthusiasm of the early leaders was rapidly sapped by other interests and responsibilities. By 1825, only nine years after its founding, the society had become inactive and moribund, and eventually it passed into the National Institution for the Promotion of Science, which was incorporated in 1840 by an act of Congress.

The National Institute for the Promotion of Science held monthly meetings for a year or two and issued three bulletins between 1840 and 1845. Its one great effort was the holding of a pretentious Congress of Scientists in Washington in April, 1844. Invitations to participate in it were extended to the members of the American Philosophical Society, to members of other learned societies, and to eminent citizens throughout the United States. The opening address of the Congress was by John Tyler, then President of the United States. The principal address was delivered by Senator Robert J. Walker, of Mississippi. Ex-President John Quincy Adams, then a member of Congress from Massachusetts, Senator Woodbury of New Hampshire, the Hon. J. R. Ingersoll, of Pennsylvania, and the Hon. John C. Spencer, Secretary of War, served as chairmen of various sessions throughout the Congress, at which 43 papers were presented. The society never met again, but it did not pass out of existence technically until the expiration of its Federal Charter in 1861.

The founding of the National Institution for the Promotion of Science was a valiant attempt to organize American science under central governmental sponsorship. Although it was launched with fanfare and high hopes its failure was speedy and complete.

At almost the same time (1818) a professor in Yale University, Benjamin Silliman, started a modest journal, the American Journal of Science and Arts (the words "and Arts" omitted after 1880), which has contributed very greatly to the advancement of American science for 130 years. Silliman not only started his journal when such a publication was sorely needed, but he was its editor, its financial backer, its moving spirit for many years. He provided a medium in which scientists might publish reports of their work and through which they might become acquainted with one another at a time when travel was difficult and costly. For several decades Silliman's journal was the brightest light in American science.

From the year 1492 down to 1800 Europe was discovering and exploring the Americas, the adventurous histories of which have thrilled the youths of every land. In the same period such scientific pioneers as Harvey (1578-1657), Newton (1642-1727), Halley (1656-1742), Linnaeus (1707-1778), Euler (1707-1783), Priestley (1733-1804), Lagrange (1736-1813), Galvani (1737-1798), Herschel (1738-1822), Lamarck (1744-1829), Volta (1745-1827), Dalton (1766-1844), and Humboldt (1769-1859) were exploring the universe about us—the physical universe of the earth and the myriads of bodies beyond, and the biological universe on the land, in the sea, and in the air.

In this same period the pioneers who crossed the ocean to this new land were largely engaged in making homes in the wilderness and in establishing churches, schools and procedures for conducting an organized society. Only Benjamin Franklin (1706-1790) ranked with the foremost European scientists. Yet with the passing of time America, too, became more and more interested in art, literature, and science. In the constitution of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, adopted in 1780, there was the provision ". . . it shall be the duty of Legislatures and Magistrates, in all future periods of this Commonwealth, to cherish the interests of literature, and the sciences, and all seminaries of them . . . , to encourage private societies and public institutions, rewards and immunities, for the promotion of agriculture, arts, sciences, commerce, trades, manufactures, and a natural history of the country " Under this constitution the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, of Boston, was incorporated in 1780, and the American Philosophical Society received its first charter from the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in the same year, although it had existed as an informal organization since it was started by Benjamin Franklin in 1743

Natural Philosophy and Natural History In the early part of the nineteenth century science was generally classified as Natural Philosophy and Natural History, the former including the physical sciences and geology and the latter including the biological sciences Geology was the first of the branches of Natural Philosophy to be cultivated extensively in America, for a new continent was to be explored and its great mineral riches were to be brought to light Seventeen states made provisions for geological surveys between 1823 and 1839 This geological interest led to attempts at establishing national geological societies, the first of which was the American Geological Society, incorporated in Connecticut in 1819 Silliman was one of its vice presidents, and its membership included men from every state in the Union The society died in 1826, but its spirit reappeared in the Association of American Geologists, organized in 1840

Increasing interest in science in America was by no means limited to Geology and Natural Philosophy, as the physical sciences were called Provision was explicitly made for the biological sciences in the charter of the American Philosophical Society, and papers on biological subjects were always welcomed in Silliman's Journal In 1836 the legislature of New York State authorized a Natural History Survey, and the next year Massachusetts followed with plans for a Zoological and Botanical Survey These activities stimulated interest in the founding, on a national scope, of a society that would include all the sciences For a decade discussions of the possibilities continued

The founding of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, in 1831, stimulated consideration of similar plans in this country In 1837, Dr John Collins Warren, a prominent citizen of Boston, attended a meeting of the British Association and presented a paper before one of its sessions He was so impressed by the meeting that, upon his return in August, 1838, he actively undertook the promotion of a similar society in the United States A "Committee of Correspondence of the American Association" was formed Late in October the Committee informed the American Philosophical Society of their plans and activities and asked cooperation in organizing the proposed new society The following year the American Philosophical Society decided that it would be inexpedient for it to participate in the organization of the new society Despite this action, interest in the proposed association continued In 1842 the Association of American Geologists, which had been organized in 1840, became The Association of American Geologists and Naturalists Charles (later Sir Charles) Lyell, author of the revolutionary Principles of Geology, was present and took part in the meeting

This society held its last meeting in Boston in September, 1847 On September 24, under the chairmanship of William C Redfield, the society passed a resolution changing its name to the American Association for the Promotion of Science, an organization "designed to embrace all laborers in Physical Science and Natural History"

About a year later, on September 20, 1848, the society for the "Promotion of Science" held its first (and last) regular meeting in the library room of the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia. At 12 o'clock, noon, the meeting was called to order by William B. Rogers who read a draft of a "Constitution and Rules of Order" which had been prepared by a committee appointed for the purpose at the meeting in the preceding year. This report recommended that the name of the new society be the "American Association for the Advancement of Science." Upon the adoption of the committee's report the American Association for the Advancement of Science came into existence.

At 4 p. m. on Wednesday, September 20, 1848, Professor Rogers called to order the first meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and introduced its first president, Mr. William C. Redfield, of New York. Among the eminent scientists present whose names after a hundred years are still well known were Stephen Alexander, Louis Agassiz, Alexander D. Bache, Asa Gray, Joseph Henry, Benjamin Silliman, and John Torrey. The total original membership of the Association was 461.

III. The First Twenty Years, 1848-1867

The first meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, which was held in Philadelphia from September 20, 1848, to September 25, excluding Sunday, September 24, lacked entirely the pomp and ceremony of the meeting four years earlier of the politically sponsored National Institution for the Promotion of Science. The Association meeting was a gathering of scientists for the discussion of scientific problems and advances, not a forum for parading wisdom or making startling predictions. Benjamin Peirce, the foremost American mathematician of the time, read a paper "On the General Principles of Analytical Mechanics," and Louis Agassiz followed with a paper "On the Classification of the Animal Kingdom." About 60 papers were presented at the meeting.

Later meetings of the Association followed the general pattern of the first, though with greater numbers of sections to correspond with the increasing subdivisions of science. There were only two sections at the first meeting, "Natural History, Geology, etc.," and "General Physics, etc." At the second meeting, held in Cambridge, Massachusetts, in August, 1849, there were several new sections, such as "Geology and Paleontology," "Zoology," and "Mathematics."

The subjects discussed at the meetings of the Association were largely determined by current reports of advances of science in Europe and by the special geological and natural history problems of a new land. Several great scientific discoveries and generalizations had been made in the decades immediately preceding the years under consideration. One of the most important was Dalton's atomic theory (1808), based on Prout's experimental proof of the law of multiple proportions in chemical reactions. Avogadro's inference, or hypothesis, was announced in 1811 Wohler's synthesis of urea, in 1825, assured chemists that the laws of their science hold also in the organic field

In the field of the earth sciences, revolutionary ideas had been advanced in the three volumes of Lyell's Principles of Geology, published in 1830, 1832, and 1833 and based on observations and reflections of two decades He interpreted the geological transformations of the exterior parts of the earth as having been produced during enormous periods of time by geological agencies now in operation The Nebular Hypothesis of Laplace (1806) provided a plausible basis for the conclusion that the earth had existed for millions of years

Almost simultaneously with the work and publications of Lyell in the field of geology, Michael Faraday, of London, and Joseph Henry, the second president of the Association, conducted experiments (1820, ) on the relations between electricity and magnetism, and organized their results into laws which have been fundamental in the almost countless technological applications of electricity (and magnetism) during the past sixty years Experiments and theories of such profound importance and unparalleled consequences were only partially understood by scientists at the time, yet they stimulated the imaginations and opened new horizons

Another generalization of great importance in the history of science was the law of the conservation of energy (more precisely the Second Law of Thermodynamics) which was formulated almost simultaneously by Robert Mayer and James P Joule, in 1842 In 1847 Helmholtz extended it to the organic world, and it appeared later in his theory that the source of heat of the sun is its contraction, which changes its potential energy into kinetic

The biological sciences during the middle decades of the nineteenth century were also undergoing revolutionary changes The cell theory of the structure and functioning of living organisms was being evolved in this period And it was about the time of the founding of the American Association for the Advancement of Science that the principles of organic evolution began to take definite form in the minds of Darwin, Wallace, and Spencer

There was a Golden Age in Greece and an Elizabethan Period in England In quite a real sense there was a Scientific Age in Europe and America in the nineteenth century, without definite beginning and as yet no ending Since the Association has a Section on Education, the remark may be ventured that an Age of Education began in the United States in about 1900 As an anticlimax, the whole world now widely fears an Age of War and the End of Civilization But hopes may be encouraged by the fact that in all the past neither philosophers nor scientists were able to foresee the future

One of the purposes of the Association, as defined in its original Rules, was (and still is) to hold "periodical and migratory meetings, to promote intercourse between those who are cultivating science in different parts of the United States " In the 20 years under consideration, 1848-1867, inclusive, the Association held 16 meetings, each in a different city, in accordance with the Rules With science stirring men's imaginations throughout Europe and America, these were good meetings, organized by scientists, attended by scientists, and addressed by scientists The beginnings were very auspicious, interest in the meetings grew, the membership of the Association increased, hopes for the future were high. The second meeting was held in Cambridge, Mass., August 14-20, 1849, in 1850 there were two meetings, one in Charleston, S. C., March 12-16, and the other in New Haven, Conn., August 19-24. In 1851 there were also two meetings of the Association, one in Cincinnati, May 5-9, inclusive, and the other in Albany, N. Y., in August.

Then something happened, both disturbing and stimulating. The meeting scheduled to be held in Cleveland, Ohio, in August, 1852, had to be postponed because of the prevalence of cholera along the approaches to Cleveland from the south. The postponement was disturbing because it interrupted the series of meetings of the Association after only six had been held. It was stimulating because of the challenge the epidemic presented to scientists. The postponed Cleveland meeting was held in 1853.

After the meeting in Cleveland in 1853, one meeting of the Association was held each year until 1860. In the spring of 1861 civil war broke out between the South and the North. Those who jointly had won their political freedom and established a great republic on this continent became bitter enemies, mutual hatreds flamed in the hearts of those who had been friends, even families were divided by undying enmities, large sections of the country were laid waste and all of it was impoverished. For six years the Association held no meetings. Finally, in August, 1866, the Association held a meeting in Buffalo, N. Y., but it was not such a meeting as the previous ones had been.

IV. The Second Twenty Years, 1868-1887

There has always been a long period of discussion of revolutionary new scientific theories before they were generally accepted, even by scientists. For example, the Copernican theory of the solar system was a subject of acrimonious debate for a century. Similarly, in the first decade of the period now under discussion (1868-1887) the Association's programs and the retiring addresses of its presidents were greatly influenced by the important scientific discoveries and theories of earlier decades, which only then were understood and believed to be true.

For example, the great works of Lyell (published in 1830-33) on the slow geological processes and their gradual transformation of the earth's surface were by no means universally accepted by geologists before 1870. The significance of Joule's experiments (1847) on the mechanical equivalent of heat was not generally appreciated for a decade or more. The paper (1855) of Alfred Russel Wallace, entitled The Origin of New Species, received very little attention following its publication, and Charles Darwin's monumental Origin of Species (1859) aroused much more opposition than approbation for at least a decade. Kirchhoff's fundamental work on the principles of spectrum analysis (1859) and Angstrom's work in the same field (1860), though they described means by which scientists could reach out to the sun and the stars and learn whether they are composed of the same elements as the earth, were of little immediate interest to astronomers or physicists. Mendel's theory of the mechanism of organic inheritance (1866), supported by abundant experimental evidence and clearly and fully described in his paper, attracted no attention for nearly 40 years until its existence and importance were uncovered in 1900. Mendeleff published his Periodic Table of the chemical elements in 1868, and from it (1871) he anticipated the existence of previously unknown elements, but his work was not appreciated until after the discovery of gallium, one of the predicted elements. The Michelson-Morley ether drift experiment was carried out in 1887, the last of the twenty years of the period under consideration. In no previous period of four or five decades were there so many and so varied scientific advances of fundamental importance.

The Seventeenth meeting of the Association held in Chicago in August, 1868, was the first large-scale meeting of the Association after the close of the war between the North and the South. It was distinguished by two lengthy addresses, one by Benjamin Apthorp Gould (astronomy), then President of the Association, who delivered a comprehensive summary of the life and scientific work of Alexander Dallas Bache, President of the Association in 1850, and the other was the address of Frederick A. P. Barnard (astronomy) as retiring president of the Association.

The program of the Chicago meeting in 1868 was organized under two general titles "A, Mathematics, Physics, and Chemistry, and B, Natural History," the former group comprising 26 papers and the latter 12 papers, all of which were printed in the Proceedings of the meeting, and 106 additional papers which were presented but not printed in the Proceedings.

The Eighteenth Meeting (1869) In August, 1869, the Association held its eighteenth meeting, in Salem, Massachusetts, under the presidency of J W Foster (geography) The program of scientific papers was organized under the same general headings as in the preceding year, but the subdivisions were more numerous, five under the group designated as Mathematics, Physics, and Astronomy, and four under the group for Natural History, including Ethnology for the first time

The Nineteenth Meeting (1870) of the Association was held in Troy, New York, under the presidency of William Chauvenet (mathematics) A notable event of the meeting at Troy was the address of J W Foster (geography), President of the Association in 1869, who reviewed the then recent discoveries and theories of the conditions in the northern hemisphere during the Cretaceous and Tertiary geological periods After enumerating many of the relatively rapid changes in the flora and fauna of these periods he inquired, "How far has man been a witness to these stupendous changes?" In this discussion he expressed his belief in the antiquity of man in North America, an opinion not generally accepted by anthropologists until several decades later

In the business report of the Permanent Secretary of the Association, Dr Joseph Lovering, it was stated that the cost for paper, printing and binding the list of all members of the Association up to the time of the Salem meeting (about 1,200) and the complete proceedings of the meeting, a total of 350 pages, 5½ by 8½, was $1,192 10 At this time the admission fee for membership was $5 00 and the annual dues were $2 00

The Twentieth Meeting (1871) of the Association was held in Indianapolis, Indiana, August 16-22, under the presidency of Asa Gray (botany) This was the first meeting of the Association in Indiana and the second west of Ohio

Under the general heading Mathematics, Physics, and Chemistry, with three subheadings, 23 papers were read and printed in the Proceedings and under the heading Natural History, with four subheadings, 22 papers were presented At the Indianapolis meeting, as well as at the Troy, New York, meeting of the preceding year, the experiment was made of having a third section of the program under the heading Practical Science Only two papers were offered under this heading at each of the two meetings In addition to the 47 papers read at the meeting and printed in the Proceedings, 63 papers were presented but not published

The Twenty-first Meeting (1872) was held in Dubuque, Iowa, August 15-21, 1872, under the presidency of J Lawrence Smith (chemistry) Asa Gray, President of the Association the preceding year, delivered his retiring address on the Sequoias of California and related trees throughout the world He discussed their probable evolution under the slowly changing climatic conditions of the immediately preceding geological periods

From its founding in 1848 until 1851 the Association operated under what was called "Objects and Rules of the Association" After the latter year it was called its "Constitution," which remained in effect until it was succeeded in 1856 by a new Constitution In March, 1874, the Association was incorporated by an act of the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts under the official name "American Association for the Advancement of Science," and a revised Constitution superseded the one adopted in 1856. The new Constitution adopted in 1874, provided for Vice Presidents for the sections, then two in number (A. Mathematics, Physics and Chemistry. B. Natural History), setting the pattern for additional sections as science became more and more diversified and as the number of members of the Association increased.

In the ten years from 1878 to 1887, inclusive, the meetings of the Association were held in cities enumerated in the statistical summary at the end of this section. The programs increased in number of papers as the membership of the Association increased from 962 in 1878 to 1,956 in 1887, and the average quality of the papers improved with the increasing contacts of American scientists with European science through scientific publications and visits to European centers of learning. This was the period in which various sections and subsections of the Association were approaching permanent form. Almost from the beginning there had been subsections of the physical sciences and at times subsections of what was known as "Natural History." Among the first in the latter group to become firmly established were anthropology (or ethnology), botany, and zoology.

V. The Third Twenty Years, 1888-1907

Among the scientific achievements of far-reaching importance in this period were the Michelson-Morley ether drift experiments, Hertz's experimental verification of Maxwell's electromagnetic theory of light, the discovery of x rays by Roentgen in 1895, the work of M and Mme Curie on radium, beginning in 1899, the quantum theory of Planck (1901), the equivalence of mass and energy (Einstein, 1905) and Einstein's theory of relativity, the proofs by De Vries and Bateson that animal and plant evolutions are by mutations, the rediscovery in 1900 of Mendel's laws of inheritance (1865), and Weismann's work on the distinction between body cells and germ cells in the question of the inheritance of acquired characters

In the first half of this 20-year period (1888-1897) the membership of the Association varied relatively little, with an average of about 1,900. The number of papers presented at the meetings ranged from about 200 to 400, the number depending in part upon the cities in which the meetings were held. The presidential and vice-presidential addresses generally were reports on the progress of science or the histories of scientific theories. As illustrations, there were presidential addresses with the titles "Theories of the Origin of Mountain Ranges," "The Magnitude of the Solar System," "A Completed Chapter in the History of the Atomic Theory," "The Science of Education," and "The Interdependence of Medicine and other Sciences of Nature."

It was in this 20-year period that American students flocked to German universities in greatest numbers, returning to this country fired with enthusiasm for scholarship and research. This was the period also in which universal education was confidently believed to be the road to health, wealth and happiness. Elementary schools for all children and higher education for the many, was the American goal which has been largely attained. Under these conditions the membership of the Association increased rapidly—from 1,964 in 1888 to 5,114 in 1907. In 1900 Science, owned and edited by Dr J McKeen Cattell, became the official journal of the Association and added greatly to its effectiveness in advancing science and increasing its membership.

VI. The Fourth Twenty Years, 1908-1927

This period was divided into two parts by World War I, the seven years from 1908 to 1914, inclusive, and the nine years from 1919 to 1927, inclusive, with the intervening four war years from 1915 to 1918, inclusive

In the pre-war seven years the membership of the Association steadily increased from 5,114 to 8,325 and the meetings on the whole were correspondingly larger. The reputation of the Association is indicated by the eminence of its presidents in the seven years, 1908-1914 T C Chamberlin, David Starr Jordan, A A Michelson, Charles E Bessey, E C Pickering, Edmund B Wilson, and Charles W Eliot

Meetings of the Association were held in each of the four war years, 1915-1918, but they were adversely affected by military struggles 3,000 miles away For the first time scientists from many fields and in large numbers were drawn away from their scientific work to the destructions of war It was felt that several years of the lives of mature scientists had been wasted, and that the lives of college and university students had been blighted The near future of American science did not then appear promising But immediately after the close of the war, interest in science became greater than ever before

The first meeting of the Association west of Dubuque was held in Denver, Colorado, in 1901 From this time onward the populations of the Pacific and Mountain States increased rapidly, with corresponding increases in educational and scientific institutions To meet the needs for scientific meetings without the expense of traveling nearly across the continent, the Pacific Division of the Association was organized in 1915 and the Southwestern Division in 1920

Down to, and including, 1905 the Association published a volume of Proceedings of each year's meeting Besides the names of all officers and the Constitution of the Association, it contained the names of all members, both living and deceased, and complete programs of all meetings The written addresses of presidents and vice presidents were printed and at least digests of all papers for which manuscripts were available In 1906 there were two meetings, one in Ithaca, beginning on June 28, and one in New York City, from December 27 to January 2, inclusive. Somewhat condensed reports of these two meetings were published in one volume in 1907.

VII. The Fifth Twenty Years, 1928-1947

This period, ending with December 31, 1947, will lack only nine months of completing the fifth twenty years since the Association was established, September 20, 1848.

Three previous volumes of Proceedings have been published in this period for the respective intervals 1925-1929, 1929-1934, 1934-1940. Each of these volumes contains comprehensive reports of the state of the Association during the period which it covers, including lists of the officers for the respective years. Each volume contains also a directory of all members of the Association at the time of its publication and the names of all persons whose memberships had terminated in the interval since the publication of the immediately preceding volume.

A Permanent Home for the Association

From the year of its founding (1848) until 1946 the Association had no home of its own. For more than 50 years its headquarters were in the office or home of the Permanent Secretary wherever it might be. Finally, in 1907, the Smithsonian Institution generously gave the Association free office space in its main building. Gradually both the Smithsonian Institution and the Association outgrew all the available office space in the Smithsonian building. Then the Association turned its attention to obtaining a permanent home.

In April, 1946, the Executive Committee approved the purchase of what in Washington is called a "square," an area bounded by streets on all four sides. The area purchased by the Association is not exactly rectangular, for it lies between N Street on the north, an east-west street, and Massachusetts Avenue on the south, a boulevard running slightly north of west from the Union (railway) Station to the western boundary of Washington, and beyond. Therefore the Association's "square" is wider on its eastern side (15th Street) than on its western side, where it fronts on Scott Circle. Its area available for building is 9,250 square feet and the building code of the District of Columbia permits the erection of a building 90 feet high. It would be possible to erect on the Association "square" a building providing over 50,000 square feet of office space.

It would be difficult to find a more desirable place for a permanent home for the Association than its "square" facing on Scott Circle. On the west, passing under Scott Circle, is Sixteenth Street, the principal north-south street through Washington, terminating on the south at Lafayette Park in line with, and one block from, the White House. Massachusetts Avenue, on the south, is the main boulevard through Washington from the southeast to the northwest. Rhode Island Avenue, meeting Scott Circle on the northeast, is a direct automobile route to Baltimore and Philadelphia.

The Association's property is near the center of the permanent homes of a large number of scientific, educational, and cultural organizations. Within only two or three minutes' walk of its office are such institutions as the Carnegie Institution of Washington, the American Chemical Society, the National Education Association, the National Geographic Society, American Council of Learned Societies, and Science Service. And there are, also within two or three blocks, banking and post-office facilities and excellent means of transportation.

AFFILIATED AND ASSOCIATED SOCIETIES

In the interval from about 1870 to 1920 many scientific societies were organized in special fields. As a rule they met with the Association and participated in its programs, but maintained their identities and, as their memberships increased, many of them established journals in their respective special subjects. Eventually the societies with large and increasing memberships were compelled to meet separately, but most of their members continued their memberships in the Association.

In the constitution of the Association adopted in 1920, provision was made for maintaining the fundamental interdependence of the sciences and of scientific societies in spite of their increasing divergencies. A new pattern for organized science was set up by providing for one great society, the A A A S, covering generally all fields of science, and for independent special societies affiliated with the general society and having representation on its governing body, the Council.

Well-established societies in widely recognized fields of science may be admitted as affiliated societies of the Association by vote of its Council. Every affiliated society may elect one representative on the Council of the Association and one additional representative if it has more than 100 members who are fellows of the Association. The affiliated societies elect a majority of members of the Council of the Association. The associated societies have no representation on the Council of the Association, but have all other rights and privileges of affiliated societies. The affiliated and associated societies pay no entrance fees or dues to the Association and are invited to participate in its general meetings. The American Association for the Advancement of Science and its 203 affiliated and associated societies, with a combined membership of hundreds of thousands, constitute a great federation of organized scientific societies not paralleled elsewhere in the world.

ORGANIZATION AND OPERATION OF THE ASSOCIATION

History of the Constitution

When the Association was organized in 1848 it adopted and began operations under "Objects and Rules of the Association," consisting of a statement of "Objects" and 20 "Rules" that had been drawn up and presented by a committee appointed for the purpose the preceding year. The supreme power of the Association was vested in the Standing Committee, consisting of the general officers, the chairmen and secretaries of the sections and six other elected members. The annual dues of one dollar per year entitled each member to a copy of the Proceedings of the Association.

In 1851 the "Objects and Rules" became a "Constitution" with two amendments, one providing for dropping members who were in arrears on their dues for two years and the other raising the annual dues to two dollars.

In 1856 a new draft of the Constitution was adopted.

After discussions extending over two years, a completely revised constitution of 38 articles was adopted in 1874. The committee reporting on the provisions of the new constitution said, "The constitutional troubles, which for many years have often caused the meetings to assume the temporary character of a parliamentary body, have finally been disposed of." The annual dues of members were increased from two to three dollars.

In 1874 the Association was incorporated under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. (See p 22)

The Constitution of the Association was amended in 1881, 1886, and 1887. In 1887 the Standing Committee was changed to the Council.

There was no thorough revision of the Constitution of the Association from 1874 to 1920, a period of 46 years. In this interval the membership of the Association had increased from 722 to 11,547. Affiliated and associated societies had been provided for in 1899. In 1920 there were 41 affiliated societies, 12 affiliated academies of science and 40 associated societies. Under these greatly changed conditions a revised and simplified constitution became imperative. In 1917 a committee consisting of J. McKen Cattell, H. L. Fairchild and D. T. MacDougal was appointed to make a radical revision of the Constitution. The report of the committee was presented and adopted in 1920.

The Constitution adopted in 1920 increased the annual dues of members from three to five dollars. The present Constitution (page 23) was drawn up by a committee consisting of Otis W. Caldwell, Burton E. Livingston, and F. R. Moulton.

Classes of Members

Annual members, life members and sustaining members are defined in the Constitution, Article II, Section 2, page 23. There are three classes of honorary members (1) Members of the Finance Committee of the Association, (2) officers and members of the Council of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, and (3) honorary junior members. Honorary junior members are boys and girls, nominated by the affiliated academies of science and elected to honorary junior membership by the Executive Committee of the Association. Each affiliated academy of science has the privilege of nominating each year for honorary junior membership in the Association one boy and one girl from the junior academy or junior science clubs in its territory. Each honorary junior member receives a certificate of honorary junior membership, and subscriptions for The Scientific Monthly and Science News Letter during the year of his or her honorary junior membership.

Divisions of the Association

In order to avoid the necessity for many members to travel half way across the continent to attend meetings of the Association, the Pacific Division was established in August, 1915, at a meeting of the Association in San Francisco, the first meeting on the Pacific Coast, and it held its first meeting in San Diego in August, 1916. The territory of the Pacific Division includes Alaska, British Columbia, Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho, Nevada, Utah and the Hawaiian Islands.

The Southwestern Division was established in 1920. Its territory includes Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, Texas west of the 100th meridian and the Mexican states of Sonora and Chihuahua. It held its first meeting in El Paso, Texas, in April, 1920.

The Pacific and Southwestern Divisions are entirely autonomous. They elect their own officers, determine the times and places of their meetings, organize their programs, and publish announcements and reports of their meetings in the Association's journals. The Divisions are allowed for secretarial expenses one dollar of the membership dues of each member of the Association who is a resident of their respective territories. About 3,800 members of the Association reside in the territory of the Pacific Division, and about 650 in the territory of the Southwestern Division.

Sections of the Association

The scientific programs of the meetings of the Association are largely organized under 15 sections in cooperation with the affiliated and associated societies. Each section has a Chairman, who is a vice president of the Association for the section, with a term of office of one year, a Secretary, with a term of office of four years, and a Section Committee, consisting of four fellows, one of whom is elected each year by the section committee for a term of four years, and the representatives on the Council from the affiliated societies whose chief interests are in the field of the section.

The vice president for each section delivers a formal vice presidential address, usually at the meeting at which his term of office expires, on some subject of wide interest in the field of the section. The addresses of the vice presidents are generally published in Science and are referred to with titles and places of publication in the Summarized Proceedings

The secretaries as chief administrative officers of the sections have burdensome and important responsibilities, among which are the planning of programs at the meetings of the Association, generally in cooperation with the officers of several affiliated societies. Many of the programs of sections and their cooperating affiliated societies contain more papers than any entire program of the Association for the first 50 years of its existence. The section secretaries also arrange for the voting of the section committees, or the members of the sections, on nominations of vice presidents, nominations of section committeemen, nominations of fellows, election of committees and other special representatives. In order to provide an easy opportunity for interchanges of ideas between secretaries and for conferences respecting the problems arising in the operations of the sections, a Secretaries Conference is held at each annual meeting of the Association. This conference follows a dinner and is attended by the members of the Executive Committee.

The Association's Journals

Science and The Scientific Monthly. Science, a weekly journal which completed its 106th volume in 1947, has been an official publication of the Association since 1900. It comprises two volumes per year, each of about 650 pages, and is primarily for professional scientists in all fields of science. The Scientific Monthly, an illustrated nontechnical magazine which completed its 65th volume in 1947, has been an official publication of the Association since 1915. It comprises two volumes per year, each of about 550 pages, and is edited and published for persons who are interested in the ever-increasing march of science and its effects upon society. Every member of the Association receives with his membership a subscription for either Science or The Scientific Monthly, at his option. At the close of 1947 the weekly circulation of Science exceeded 25,600 and the monthly circulation of The Scientific Monthly exceeded 16,000.

Both Science and The Scientific Monthly were owned and edited by Dr J. McKeen Cattell from their acquisitions by him in 1896 and 1915, respectively, until his death on January 20, 1944, when they became the property of the Association, subject to an annuity payment to his heirs, under an agreement entered into in 1925 and amended in December, 1938.

Symposium Publications

At the Denver meeting of the Association in June, 1937, a symposium was presented by the Section on Medical Sciences (Dr Malcolm H. Soule, Secretary) entitled Tuberculosis and Leprosy. By vote of the Executive Committee of the Council, the manuscripts of this symposium were published in book form, pages 7½ by 10½, illustrated, cloth bound. This was the first of twenty-two volumes based on programs presented at meetings of the Association or at the AAAS-Gibson Island Research Conferences on Chemistry. These books have been sold widely throughout the world.

Prizes

The First Thousand Dollar Prize for "a Notable Contribution to Science" was established in 1923 by a generous friend of the Association who desires to remain anonymous. Beginning in 1923, the Prize has been awarded at each annual meeting of the Association.

The Prize is awarded in recognition of the importance of scientific research reported for the first time before some scientific session at a general meeting of the Association. It is not necessary that a paper considered for The Thousand Dollar Prize shall have been presented by a member of the Association, but, to be eligible for consideration, it shall not have been an official address or an invited paper. It is the wish of the donor of the Prize that younger scientists shall be particularly considered in making the award and that it be granted to one person rather than divided among several.

The recipients of The Thousand Dollar Prize, their fields and the subjects of their papers for which the prizes have been awarded are as follows:

- 1923 Leonard Eugene Dickson (mathematics) "The Theory of Numbers"
- *1924 (1) Edwin P. Hubble (astronomy) "The Spiral Nebulae" (2) L. R. Cleveland (biology) "The Physiology of Termites and their Intestinal Protozoa"

The Theobald Smith Award, established in 1937 by the Eli Lilly and Company, for a distinguished contribution to medical science by a person under thirty-five years of age, has been awarded as follows

- 1937 Robley D Evans "A Study of Radium Poisoning"
 1938 Charles F Code "Histamine in the Blood"

Grants in Aid of Research

The Association has limited Trust Funds, the income from which can be used only in support of scientific research. Most of the funds available from this source are allotted to affiliated academies of science for administration of research grants to their members. The basis of allotment to the affiliated academies of science is fifty cents per year for each of their members who are also members of the Association. The affiliated academies are required to make applications for grants, accompanied by a statement of the qualifications of each applicant and the nature of the proposed research. Upon completion of the project, the recipient of the grant is required to file with the Association a copy of the published report of his investigations.

The Annual Science Exhibition

At each annual meeting of the Association, beginning at the Kansas City meeting in 1925, the Association has had a Science Exhibition. The foremost American manufacturers of scientific equipment and supplies have had booths for displaying their products, and the leading publishers of scientific books have had their publications available for examination. In addition, university, governmental and other nonprofit laboratories have exhibited the products of their researches or shown the methods they have developed and used in their scientific work.

Research Conferences on Chemistry

In 1938, Dr. Neil E. Gordon, secretary of the Section on Chemistry (1937-1947), organized Special Research Conferences on various fields of chemistry and its applications with the approval of the Executive Committee of the Association. The official name of these conferences is "Gordon Research Conferences under the sponsorship of the A A A S". From their inception in 1938 until 1946 they were held on Gibson Island, an island in Chesapeake Bay about 20 miles south of Baltimore, having outgrown the accommodations on Gibson Island, the conferences were transferred in the summer of 1947 to the grounds of Colby Junior College, New London, N. H.

Each of the Research Conferences extends through five days, Monday to Friday, inclusive. The programs are planned long in advance by specialists in their respective fields. The morning sessions consist of papers on current research and theories and of discussions by the audience, the afternoons continue the programs or are given over to group conferences or recreation, the evenings are devoted to prolonged scientific sessions.

Funds for providing accommodations for the conferences have been given to the Association from time to time by industrial laboratories. Contributions are limited to $1,000 from each donor laboratory, the only special privilege a donor has is that of nominating one representative to attend each conference. In practice the donor laboratories nominate representatives to only a fraction of the conferences, naturally to those on subjects in which they are especially interested. It is the fixed policy to have in attendance at every conference scientists from university, foundation and governmental laboratories. The program of each conference is planned months in advance by a special program committee, appointed generally by the participants in a previous conference on the same field at its final session. Since there are usually more applicants for admission to the conferences than can be accommodated, the program committee determines in such cases which applicants shall be accepted.

In the first two years of the conferences it was necessary to limit the attendance to 30 or 40 scientists. Then with the thousand dollar donations from participating laboratories, Dr. Gordon negotiated the purchase of a property on Gibson Island and supervised the improvement so that it could accommodate about 60 men, the Gibson Island Club provided accommodations for an additional 10 to 20 persons. At New London, New Hampshire, from 70 to 100 persons can be accommodated. The average attendance at the conferences in the 10 years of their existence from 1938 to 1947, inclusive, in which 80 conferences were held, was about 60 scientists, or a total attendance, including repetitions, of about 4,800.

Conferences have been held repeatedly from year to year on subjects in which rapid progress was being made. Among the subjects which appeared several times in the programs of the Research Conferences are the following

Vitamins, 9 conferences
Frontiers in Petroleum Chemistry, 8 conferences
Organic High Polymer Compounds, 8 conferences
Catalysis, 8 conferences
Structure and Chemistry of Textile Fibers, 7 conferences
Corrosion, 7 conferences
Instrumentation, 6 conferences
Relation of Structure to Physiological Action, 4 conferences
X-Ray and Electron Diffraction, 4 conferences
Food and Nutrition, 4 conferences
Cancer, 4 conferences

<sup>1</sup> Until 1943 the fiscal year of the Association began on October 1 and ended on the following September 30. Beginning with 1944 the fiscal year was changed to the calendar year.

<sup>2</sup> In 1942 the Association completed the purchase of The Scientific Monthly under the terms of an agreement entered into between the Association and Dr J McKeen Cattell in 1925 and amended in 1938 and at the same time took over its editing and publication. Included in the expenditures for the year 1942-43 is the final payment ($9,499 59) on the purchase of The Scientific Monthly.

<sup>3</sup> Upon the death of Dr J McKeen Cattell on January 20, 1944, the weekly journal Science became the property of the Association subject to the payment for 10 years of annuities to the Cattell estate as provided in an agreement between the Association and J McKeen Cattell entered into in 1925 and amended in 1938. The annuities paid to the Cattell estate and expenses incident to the settlements thereof for the years 1944-1946, which are included in the expenditures for these years, were as follows: 1944, $40,840 91, 1945, $31,170 75, 1946, $22,992 36. The annuity for 1947, amounting to $26,279 36, was paid from unrestricted funds of the Treasurer and therefore is not included in the table above. The annuities are for a term of 10 years, terminating January 19, 1954.

Article X of the constitution of the AAAS (p 26) separates the Association's funds into three parts: (a) Current Funds, (b) Investment Funds, and (c) Trust Funds. Current funds are under the control of the Administrative Secretary, investment funds and trust funds are under the control of the Treasurer.

Balance Sheet Items

(a) The current funds of the Administrative Office vary widely throughout the year because a large fraction of membership dues are paid between October 1 and January 1. As of December 31, 1947, the cash balance of the Current Funds was $250,802.13.

(b) and (c) The Investment Funds and the Trust Funds under the control of the Treasurer of the A A A S do not vary greatly throughout the year, nor do they change much from year to year. The total assets of the investment funds and trust funds as of December 31, 1947, were $302,189.99. Of this amount, $116,766.15 is capital, the income from which is restricted to the support of research, and the income from $5,500 is restricted to providing emeritus memberships. Funds for general purposes and fees of living life members amounted to $102,367.25. The remainder consists of appropriations for prizes, grants to affiliated academies of science, and for miscellaneous purposes.

Annual A.A.A.S.-Sigma Xi Lectures

At each annual meeting of the Association, beginning in 1922, a special lecture has been delivered under the joint auspices of the Association and the Society of the Sigma Xi. The Association determines the time and place of the lecture and the Society of the Sigma Xi selects the lecturer. As a consequence of World War II the Association was unable to hold any meetings in 1942, 1943 and 1945. The names of the lecturers from 1940 to 1947, inclusive, and the titles of their lectures are as follows:

1940 Anton J. Carlson "Science versus Life"

1941 Edwin P. Hubble "The Expanding Universe Theory"

1944 Edwin J. Cohn "Blood and Blood Derivatives"

1946 Elvin C. Stakman "Progress and Problems in Controlling Diseases of Plants"

1946 Harlow Shapley "Goals of International Science" (Address as retiring President of the American Astronomical Society and annual lecturer of the Sigma Xi)

1947 Glenn T. Seaborg "The Eight New Synthetic Elements"

A.A.A.S.-Phi Beta Kappa Lectures

In 1935 the Association and the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa entered into an arrangement somewhat similar to that between the Association and the Society of the Sigma Xi. The Association at each annual meeting made available on its program a time and place for a general lecture by a representative of the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa. The lectures delivered under this arrangement between 1940 and 1946, inclusive, were as follows:

1940 Walter Lippmann "Modern Education"

1941 Christian Gauss "Can We Educate for Democracy?"

1944 Harlow Shapley "A Design for Fighting"

1945 Irwin Edman "Science and the Dream of Happiness"

1946 Theodore Spencer "Science and the Poet"

The John Wesley Powell Lectures

The John Wesley Powell Memorial Lectures were established in 1929 by the Southwestern Division of the A.A.A.S. in honor of the noted explorer of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River. Under present arrangements a lecture is delivered at each annual meeting of the Division by a distinguished investigator in some field of science, upon a topic of his own selection. The lecturers and the titles of their addresses have been as follows:

1940 D. T. MacDougal "Activities in Plant Science"

1941 Bernadotte E. Schmitt "The United States and the West"

1942 Howard W. Blakeslee "Science Moves Ahead"

1947 John H. Manley "One Atom and Many"

SUMMARIZED PROCEEDINGS FOR 1940

The Association held two meetings in the calendar year 1940, a joint meeting with the Pacific Division at Seattle, June 17 to 22, and the annual meeting at Philadelphia, Pa., December 27, 1940, to January 2, 1941. The Pacific Division had met in Seattle in June, 1936. The Association had met five times previously in Philadelphia, the city of its birth—in 1848, 1884, 1904, 1914, and 1926. The Southwestern Division held a meeting at Tucson, Arizona, April 22 to 26, 1940.

At the Seattle meeting the registration was 673, and 644 papers and addresses were on the programs of the Association and the 27 affiliated or associated societies meeting with it, at Philadelphia 3,339 persons were registered and 2,164 papers and addresses were delivered or read on the programs of the Association and the 53 affiliated or associated societies meeting with it. At the close of the fiscal year 1940 (Sept 30), the membership of the Association was 21,067, of the Pacific Division, 2,127, and of the Southwestern Division, 367.

SUMMARIZED PROCEEDINGS FOR 1941

The Association held three meetings in the calendar year 1941, a summer meeting at Durham, N H, June 23 to 28, in connection with the celebration of the Seventy-Fifth Anniversary of the founding of the University of New Hampshire, a fall meeting at Chicago, Ill, Sept 22 to 27, in connection with the Fiftieth Anniversary celebration of The University of Chicago, and the annual meeting at Dallas, Texas, Dec 29, 1941, to Jan 3, 1942. The only previous meeting held in New Hampshire was at Hanover in June, 1908. There were four previous meetings in Chicago—in 1868, 1908, 1920, and 1933. The Dallas meeting was the first meeting of the Association in Texas. The Pacific Division held its annual meeting at Pasadena, Calif, June 16 to 21. The Southwestern Division held its annual meeting at Lubbock, Texas, April 28 to May 2, 1941.

At the Durham meeting the registration was 322 and 210 papers were presented. At Chicago, about 2,000 persons were registered, and 199 papers were presented, of which 160 were organized by The University of Chicago and 39 by the Association. At the Pacific Division meeting in Pasadena, 1,314 persons were registered, and 416 papers were presented. The meeting of the Southwestern Division at Lubbock had a registered attendance of 115, and 140 papers were read. The membership of the Association for 1941 was 21,798, for the Pacific Division, 2,147, and for the Southwestern Division, 400.

LIFE MEMBERS

Article II, Section 2 (b) of the Constitution of the Association authorizes the Council to provide for life memberships upon the payment of such contributions to the Trust Funds of the Association as the Council shall prescribe

The names of all persons who were life members of the Association at any time in the interval July 1, 1940, to Dec 31, 1947, appear in the following list of names and are included also, with biographical data, in the general directory of members beginning on page 145 The name of every Life Member who died prior to Jan 1, 1940, appears in some earlier volume of the Summarized Proceedings Therefore the complete membership record of every person who has been a member of the Association since the present system of records was established in 1920 down to 1940 is given in some volume of the Summarized Proceedings

The symbols following the name give the complete membership record of the member For example, the symbols following the first name below indicate that E Stanley Abbot became a member (M) in 1904, a life member (L) in 1909, and a fellow (F) in 1928 In case a member is deceased the letter D precedes the digits that indicate the year of his death An asterisk preceding a name indicates that the person is deceased

EMERITUS LIFE MEMBERS

In 1911, Jane M Smith, of Pittsburgh, Pa, bequeathed $5,000 to the Association with the stipulation that the income from the fund should be used for establishing Emeritus Life Memberships (Council minutes, Dec 27, 1911) As income received from the Fund amounts to $150, or a multiple thereof, it is used to pay life membership dues for one or more life members elected by the Council from among the members of longest continuous standing Upon the death of an emeritus life member the $150 set aside for his life membership dues reverts to the credit of income from the Fund and may be used for the payment of life-membership dues of another member elected to life membership by the Council Two or more emeritus life members have been elected each year since 1914

The names of emeritus life members who were living on Jan 1, 1940, are included, with additional information, in the complete directory of members for the period July 1, 1940-Dec 31, 1947, beginning on page 145 The names of emeritus life members who were deceased on July 1, 1940, are contained in some earlier volume of the Summarized Proceedings Therefore the complete membership record of every emeritus life member appears in some volume of the Summarized Proceedings In the case of an emeritus life member figures that immediately follow the letter E give the year of his election to emeritus life membership

An asterisk preceding the name of a member indicates that he is deceased

The symbols following the name give the complete membership record of the member For example, the symbols following the third name below indicate that Alexander P Anderson became a member (M) in 1896, a fellow (F) in 1899, an emeritus life member (E) in 1941 and died (D) in 1943 The letter D followed by a dash indicates that the year of the member's death is not known to the Association

EMERITUS ANNUAL MEMBERS

In 1932 Luella A Owen bequeathed the Association $500 without specifying the purpose for which income from it may be used. On December 29, 1932, the Council voted "that the gift of the Owen estate be used as a nucleus of a fund the income from which shall be used for emeritus annual memberships."

The letter C in the symbols following the name of an emeritus annual member precedes the year of his election as an emeritus annual member.

FIFTY-YEAR MEMBERS

On April 14, 1935, the Executive Committee passed the following by-law "Members who have paid annual dues for 50 years may be excused from further payments of dues and still retain all the privileges of active membership." In practice all members who have paid membership dues continuously for 50 years are elected fifty-year members.

The names of fifty-year members who were living on July 1, 1940, are included, with additional information, in the complete directory of members for the period July 1, 1940-Dec 31, 1947 which begins on page 145.

In the case of a fifty-year member the figures that immediately follow the letter V give the last two digits of the year he became a fifty-year member.

ALPHABETICAL DIRECTORY OF MEMBERS

For the Period July 1, 1940, to December 31, 1947

Names included in the Directory The following Alphabetical Directory includes the names of all persons who were members of the Association on December 31, 1947. It includes also the names of all members whose membership terminated by death or otherwise between July 1, 1940, and December 31, 1947. Therefore this Directory includes the names of all persons who were members of the Association at any time from July 1, 1940, to December 31, 1947.

Earlier issues of the Proceedings of the Association similarly included the names of all persons who had been members during any part of the periods they covered.

Sources of Information In order to get the necessary biographical data a special form containing blanks to be filled in with the information required was sent to every member of the Association. About 10,000 members did not reply to the first request for information. Before the remainder replied to a second request about 6,000 members changed their addresses and positions, requiring changes in the data previously submitted. In the interval about 5,000 new members were added to the membership roll of the Association, from each of whom biographical data were requested. Information about those who did not reply at all was obtained from their membership application cards and, in many instances, from other biographical directories.

Information given The personal information about each individual, when available, is as follows: (a) The full name, surname first, (b) year of birth, (c) home address, (d) principal scientific specialty, (e) highest academic degree and institution granting it, (f) professional position and title, and (g) institutional connection and address.

The membership record of each individual includes: (a) The year he became a member, (b) the year he became a fellow (if he became a fellow), (c) the year he resigned (if he resigned), (d) the year of his death (if he is deceased), (e) the section or sections with which he is affiliated, and (f) the offices he has held in the Association and their respective tenures. As an illustration, if following a member's name, address, etc., the letters M22F36D45 CM appear they mean that the person became a member (M) of the Association in 1922, a fellow (F) in 1936, died (D) in 1945, and was affiliated with the sections on Chemistry (C) and Engineering (M).
